

The Tyson Art Collection

From Andy Warhol and Roy Lichtenstein, to George Dombek and J.D. Woods, the Tyson Art collection represents decades of passionate art collecting by current Chairman John Tyson and his father, Don Tyson. The collection has over 600 catalogued works by more than 100 artists, with most works currently on display along the hallways and in the offices of our World Headquarters in Springdale, Arkansas.

The collection began with Don's love of the "Old West" experience. Don grew up reading Westerns and was fascinated by that period in our country's history.

When John began collecting, he drew on his experiences during his college years frequently visiting art galleries and museums in both the U.S. and Europe. He began collecting contemporary American art in the 1990s, and continues to expand the breadth and depth of the collection with an emphasis on Arkansas artists.

The collection contains works in many different media, including oils, watercolors, bronzes, photographs, and others.

We hope you'll enjoy the art and your visit to our corporate offices. For questions about the Tyson Art Collection, please contact Heather Chilson at 479-290-4621.
